Amidst the general selfishness and bitterness of feeling that is displayed by office holders, more partfcularly when the guillotine has been applied, it is refreshing to find one instance of liberal ideas and spirit manifested. spirit manifested. The occasion to which we allude is the presentation of a handsome silver pitcher to Dr. John McClelland, who has, for the last year filled the place of Resident Physician to the Alms House, by the various medical assistants who have been attached to that institution during his regime. The affair came off at the Carlton House, and the pitcher which bore the following inscription:

JOHN McCLELLAND, M. D.,

By his Medical Assistants in the Alms House establishment of the city of New York, as a testimonial of regard for his professional attainments, and social virtues, May 12, 1849.

Was presented to the worthy Dector by Dr. Tilden Brown, in a most appropriate speech, which was replied to in a feeling manner by Dr. McClelland. This part of the business being concluded, the company, which included some of the most eminent medical and surgical talent in the city, adjourned to the dining room, and partook of an elegant supper with the greatest zest. The cloth being removed, some most excellent remarks were made by Dr. Woon, complimentary to Dr. McClelland in reference to the activity with which he had performed his duties not only to the patients of the Institution, but in his endeavors, by means of the great medical school which he had had control of, to udvance clinical instruction, which is of so much importance to the student. He stated that the Doctor had always been most anxious to throw open all the resources of the establishment to those seeking to advance themselves in their profession, and he regretted more had not availed themselves of the opportunity. He was followed by Dr. McClelland, and Dr. Hasbrouck, the present incumbent of the office. Dr. Francis gave an excellent speech, in the course of which he adverted, in this most impressive terms, to the great attention that should be paid to clinical instruction, and concluded by proposing as a toast—"A generous intercourse among the members of the Medical profession." He called on Dr. Parker, who called on the profession to endeavor by the Plaintiff demurs to the different pleas on the following grounds: In relation to the pleas as to the first alleged libel, the grounds of demarrer stated that the matters therein are not a justification of words in first count. Plea does not specify any acts or facts which show that plaintiff was ever justly held in bad repute. The averments in regard to reputation of plaintiff are improper and insufficient to show that it was bad. Not certain that reputation as alleged was a consequence of his being known. Plea does not sufficiently aver the facts substantially alleged in libel that plaintiff was in bad repute, and that such was a consequence of his being known. The causes of demurrer on the second alleged libel sets forth generally, that the matters in the pleas do not show justification, nor specify the several matters intended as a justification; and that some of the pleas establish other charges against the plaintiff than those in the libel. The grounds of demurer go on to state that some of the pleas were informal and repignant, after averring suits, &c., without averring attorney, &c., refers to said suits which plaintiff and his attorney had already commenced. After averring, all of which was known to plaintiff does not state what facts he intended to aver were known to plaintiff.

In relation to the third alleged libel, the causes of demurrer set forth that the plea professes to answer part only of words in 2d count, and is not a justification of that part. It sufficiently appears from portion of libelious words which the plea professes to justify, and from other portions of publication in 2d count, that defendants in charging plaintiff with being the cause of affliction, &c., did not seen or refer to matters set forth in plea, and that reader would not so universtand charge. It does not appear that disrepute, &c., and plaintiff sproceedings were known to wife, &c., at the time when they wept, &c., but the time is averred to be the day plaintiff addressed the Jury after the alleged sufferings. The averm

Edward Dalton vs. William Joyce,—This was an action to recover damages for slander, uttered by defendant on the 20th January, 1845, against the plaintiff. The slanderous words were as follows:—"He (Dalton) stole half a case of linen, and I can prove it. I am the man that told Beal and Leach (two merchants) that Dalton stole the money." The words as alleged were fully proved on part of the plaintiff. The defendant made an effort to show that he did not use the words. The jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff of $50 damages and 6 cents costs.
